The Story of the years of growth of Juniata College is interesting and colorful.

Did you know that, 65 years ago dinners in the cafeteria used to be served by many of the girls at J.C.? As a requirement for passing Home Economics, girls were taught how to prepare a meal, which they served in the dining room. Another requirement of this course included living in a special house on campus for one semester to learn the basics for family maintenance. The prospective housewife was taught how to cook, sew, clean, and wash the dirty laundry which was donated by students at Juniata. At this time, our Home Economics courses were well known.

Also, did you know that until 1926 debate – not football – was the big activity here at Juniata? Intercollegiate debate was started in 1902 and the school's debate teams were known throughout the nation for its ten straight years of undefeated tournaments. Juniata's first debate with another college occured on April 25, 1902 with Susquehanna University. The subject for debate was:

> Resolved, that the United States should hold permanent possession of the Philippines.

During this debate, Juniata took the negative side and won. The first three debates Juniata had were with this University, the next two were with Penn State, resulting in a unanimous decision for Juniata in each of these five debates. In 1931, the Juniata team had its first international contest, defeating a team from England.

Can you imagine going to daily chapel in Oller Hall? Until about 15 years ago, students at Juniata were required to attend chapel services and Sunday School in Founders Hall, later Chapel in Oller Hall. The 1888-1889 cataloque states:

> Study to show thyself approved unto God, a workman that needeth not to be ashamed.

In this year, the Bible Department was begun at Juniata College. A three year curriculum including New Testament Greek was taught and the student who added a year and a half of Hebrew studies to his Greek studies was eligible to the degree, Bachelor of Sacred Literature. In 1918-1919 the School of Theology was established at Juniata and was in operation for about seven years, having one graduate from the school in 1925, the last year that the School of Theology was in operation. In addition, this era saw the start of Spiritual Emphasis

Week, the Ministerium, a fellowship of student ministers in 1927, and the Dunker Club in 1936, all of which were a vital part of campus life. The dismantling of this school which was done with great reluctance by the Trustees because of the competition with Bethany Seminary in Chicago, which had been in existence for quite some time.

These and other interesting historical facts are being uncovered during Juniata College's centennial year. For the last 100 years, Juniata College has grown in number of students as well as in the size of the faculty.

In 1876, after a long-felt need on the part of a number of devout men for a school that would meet the needs of young men and women of the Bretheran Church, the following advertisement appeared in The Pilgram, the official publication of the church of the Brethren.

> The undersigned will open a Normal Select School in the Pilgrim Building, Huntingdon, Pa. The school year will consist of four terms of eleven weeks each, beginning April 17, Sept. 4, Nov. 20, 1876, and Feb. 12, 1877.
> Tuition for eleven weeks $6.50
> Boarding per week $3.00
> The patronage of all is solicited. Special attention given to those desiring to teach. For further particulars address J. M. Zuck, Box 50, Huntingdon, Pennsylvania.

On April 17, 1876, three students and one teacher met to study around a long pine table in the borrowed room of a printing office in Huntingdon, Pennsylvania – and what is now Juniata College was born.

The teacher was Jacob M. Zuck, and his general curriculum was called Mental and Moral Science. He had started the school, known as The Huntingdon Normal School, at the urging of three related members of the Brumbaugh family, H.B., J.B., and Dr. A.B. leading members of the Church of the Brethren. They were active in the religious publishing field and had long advocated more direct participation in education by the Brethren.

It was a discouragingly small number of students in that first class in the Pilgrim building at 14th and Washington Streets. As Professor Zuck was jokingly told, At least there is one more student than you can count on both thumbs, unless you count one thumb twice.

Ten more students later joined the first class and the school continued to grow because of the tireless promotional efforts of voice and pen by Prof. Zuck and the Brumbaughs. Fifteen students enrolled in the fall of 1876, and by the fall of 1877 the student body had grown to 57.

Two more teachers were added, larger quarters were taken in the Burchinell Building at 1224 Washington Street, the new courses included mathematics, Latin, physical science, elocution, literature, Greek, German, art, and music.

Girls' Dormitory Room — 1898

School life was busy for the motto was Work or go — there will be no drones in this educational hive. Teachers and students worked together to build tables, chairs, and other needed equipment. Religious exercises were a part of each day's program. Already the start was made in extra-curricular activites, principally the Eclectic Literary Society, which was the forerunner of Juniata's many successful literary and professional clubs. The ladies were excluded from preliminary meetings of the clubs but their curiosity got the better of them and they listened at the keyholes. However, they soon were invited as members and proved their ability and earnestness.

Money was scarce — for teachers, students, and the school. The students boarded with private families or cooked for themselves. Even Prof. Zuck was a member of a boarding club, called the Seven Orphans and One More. The principal item on their daily menu was potato soup, which Historian David Emmert, one of the earliest teachers, recalls was invariably scorched. The menu for Sunday supper was apple butter and bread — when there was apple butter.

With its larger quarters, an increasing number of students and faculty members, the school was really on the move.

Then it happened, a severe smallpox epidemic swept Huntingdon and forced the fledgling Normal School to close its doors early in 1878. The students went home except for three adventurous boys who took refuge from the scourge in an abandoned building at The Forge, which was a wild, mountain gorge several miles from the town. Incidentally, these boys had food carried to them by another youngster, Martin G. Brumbaugh, who was to become president of the college and govenor of Pennsylvania. The boys subsequently created so much interest in The Forge that the entire student body and faculty made a trip there — and that was the start of Juniata's famed Mountain Day.

After the epidemic, school reopened in the spring of 1878 and as if to make up for lost time, the school exhibited more than the usual spirit. Forty-five students enrolled, then 60 in the fall. A new building was planned — when there was not a dollar in the treasury. But there was a buoyant hope in the students and a deep sense of responsibility in the faculty. These qualities paid off, for the money was found through subscriptions and Huntingdon citizens donated land on the hill. The result was Founder's Hall, which was occupied in April, 1879. Students and teachers helped to finish the building, planted trees and grass and built a fountain – complete with a pet frog.

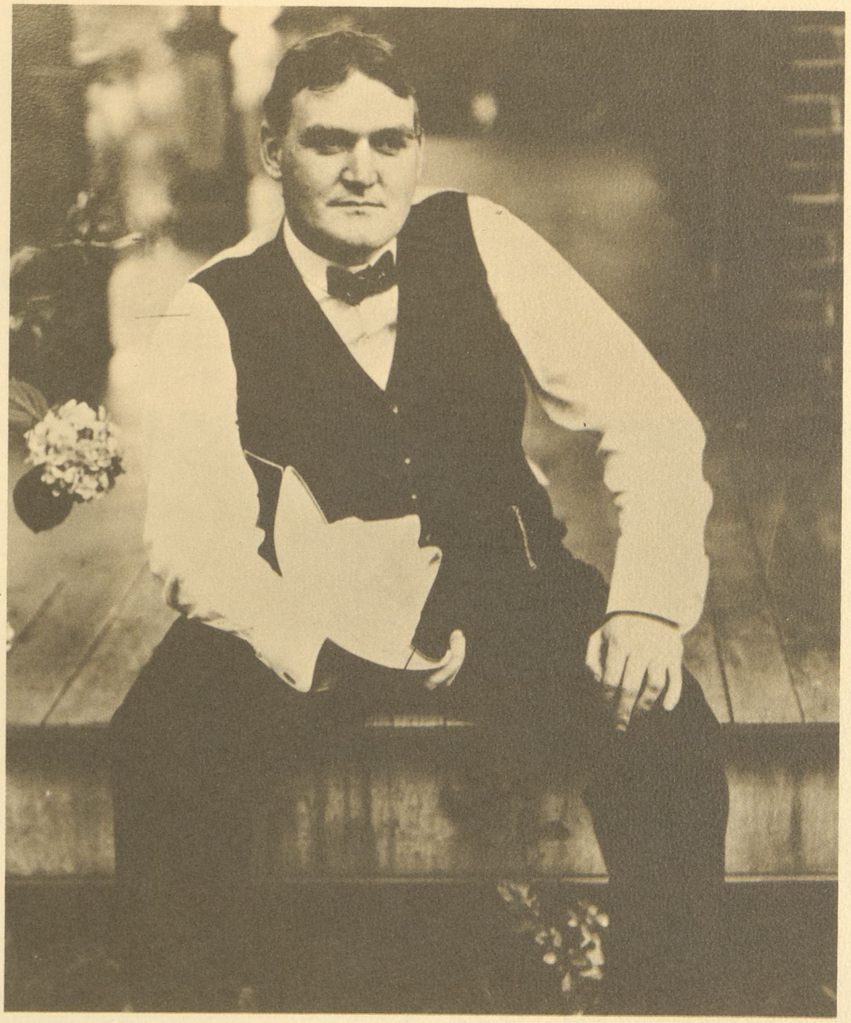
Then came another blow, Prof. Zuck died before the first class of three was graduated in the normal English course. Elder James Quintar became president and Professor Jacob H. Brumbaugh became principal.

The school prospered so much that students came beyond the limit of accomodation; everything was full even to the last room of the tower. In an effort to cope with expansion, a dorm for women known as Ladies Hall (later renamed Brumbaugh Hall) was erected and joined to the original Founders Hall in 1890. In 1895, Oneida Hall was erected and joined to Brumbaugh Hall. The first floor of Oneida Hall was used as the college dining hall with the upper floors of Oneida as additional dormitories for women. Also in 1895, Students Hall was erected and contained twelve classrooms, professors' offices, and the upper floor provided a number of dormitory rooms for men. This building, like Brumbaugh and Oneida Halls, was removed in the early '70's.

With the growth in student body, faculty, physical equipment, and curriculum the school changed its name to Bretheren's Normal School and Collegiate Institution. It then changed to Bretheren Normal College and for a third time, it was changed to The Normal College. Finally in 1894, the same year Martin G. Brumbaugh became president, Juniata – the name of the beautiful nearby river – was selected as the name for the Church of the Bretheren College that was rising from its humble beginning.

In 1900, a booklet of songs was published which contained college songs including those written by Juniata students. Two years later the college pennant was adopted with the college pin being created only a few months after that, and the college glee club being formed in 1904.

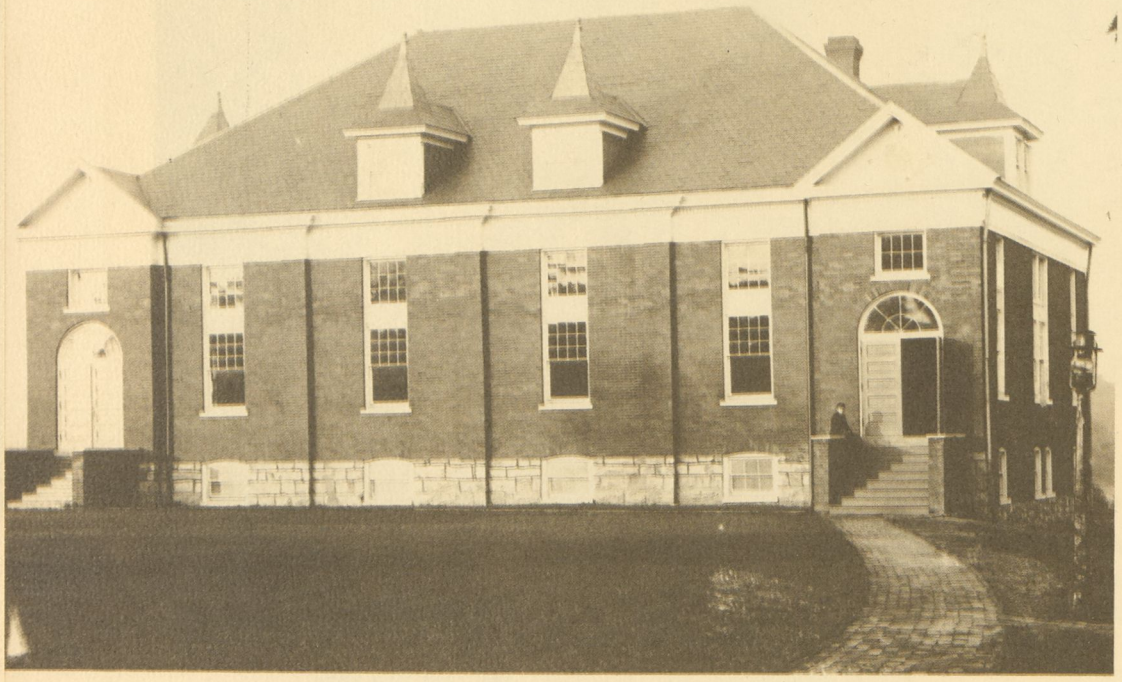
The beginning had been made, and Juniata College was on firm footing. Now came the growth of the institution from a "normal school to train teachers, to a fully recongized college of arts and sciences."



Dr. Martin G. Brumbaugh – President – 1893-1910; 1924-1930

Founder's and Brumbaugh Halls – 1900's

President I. Harvey Brumbaugh was largely responsible for this academic stride forward. By 1896, the school was able to meet the requirements of the College and University Council of Pennsylvania and attained state recognition as a college. D. C. Reber was the first college graduate in 1897, and Charles C. Ellis, who was to become one of Juniata's greatest presidents, was the second in 1898.



Gymnasium – 1901

Science Hall – 1916

The development to full college status indicated the ultimate academic direction of the Church of the Brethren institution. As the old normal course was modified and gradually lost its prestige, the college course continued to grow in value and popularity. Eventually, in 1925, the normal course was closed and Juniata became completely and solely a college – for the training not only for teaching but for many other professions.

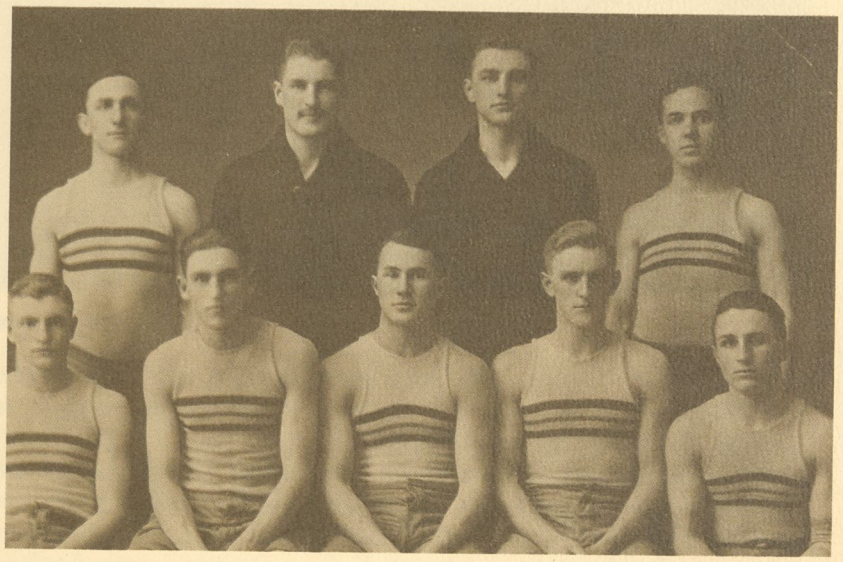
While this transition was taking place, there were important additions to the curriculum in line with the college development. There was increased emphasis on arts, several courses in Bible were inaugurated, and the music, business, home economics and education sections were enlarged. By 1918 there was a scientific course, offering a Bachelor of Science degree to supplement the college's Bachelor of Arts program.

Dr. Martin G. Brumbaugh, who became the third president in 1893, was named Commissioner of Education in Puerto Rico in 1900. Then it was that Dr. I. Harvey Brumbaugh, as acting president, took over the responsibilities and led the college through the difficult years of consolidation and growth. He became president in 1911 and held this post until 1924.

It was in his administration that Juniata became what he liked to call a right little, tight little college. He was able, in 1922, to obtain for Juniata the recognition of the Regional College Accrediting Agency, the Middle States Association of Colleges and Secondary Schools.

I. Harvey Brumbaugh — Acting President — 1899-1911, President — 1911-1924.

During this period, the college's physical equipment branched out in other needed directions. An athletic field was laid out in 1899, the gymnasium was constructed in 1901, the library in 1907, the central heating plant in 1915, and the Science Hall in 1916.



Basketball Team — 1915

1920 Football Team

In the early 1900's athletics came into their own at Juniata, with its new athletic field and gymnasium. Many sports were played informally in the late 90's. Interest increased so much that intercollegiate competition began in 1903 in track, tennis, and baseball — Juniata won its first baseball game on its athletic fields, defeating Petersburg, an area team, 10-2. But the basketball opening later was not as auspicious — Juniata lost to Lock Haven 27-10.

The girls played basketball also, and well, too. Some of the ladies became quite expert in pitching the inflated leather ball into baskets. They were temporarily stopped in 1917 when basketball for girls was prohibited because it was unscientific and unpedagogical. The game, however, was reinstated.

Football was finally given faculty approval in 1920, after constant pressure by the students for years. There was no money to develop the sport, but the students raised $600 and sent Roy Wolfgang, '27, who was later one of Juniata's grid starts, to New York to buy equipment. The team lost the first two games that year, but won the last over Thiel. However, it was not until 1922 that Juniata scored its first touchdown on the home field against Geneva.

Student life was keeping up with the times. Money was still scarce. Students backed a penny drive for additional activities. Magazine-clubbing came into vogue and produced funds for improvements. There were frequent pleas of contributions published in the ECHO, the school news-literary magazine.

Somehow, the needed money always arrived. A stranger even sent a dollar bill, and an alumnus contributed an acre of cultivated hybrid blueberries.

The first issue of the college yearbook, ALFARATA, named for an Indian maiden, appeared in 1915, with photographs of students, faculty buildings and clubs, as its successors have done. Students took over editing of the ECHO in 1914. College songbooks, bulletins and catalogues were published. And student government, an essential part of Juniata's life was established in 1922.

There were other pastimes too, like taffy pulling, sledding, and ice skating. This moved one ECHO writer to report, We had a good time ice skating on the dam. The ladies were allowed to go over some times, and we had great times. The faculty, too, was busy. You never saw a prettier sight than a college professor in the cool of the evening with cuffs, coat, and hat off, rolling smashing, plotting and leveling his little plot of ground.

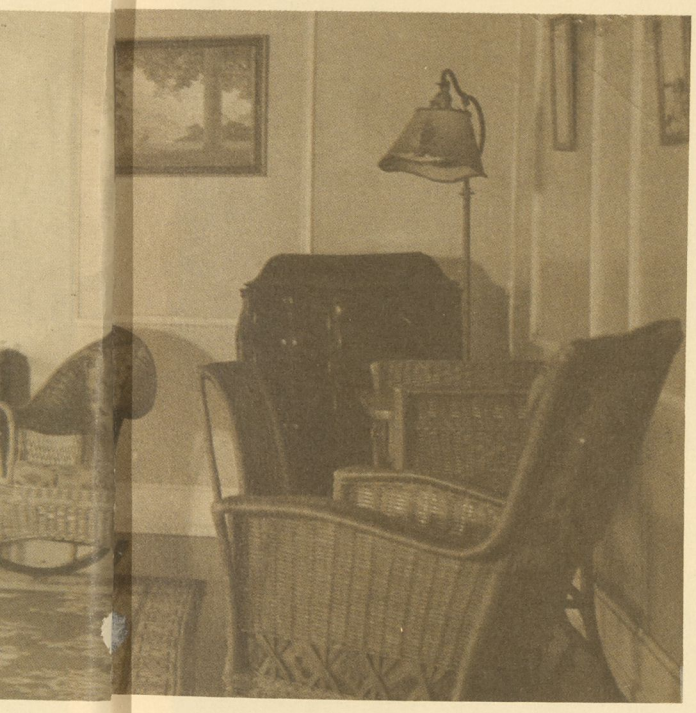
During World War I, enrollment at Juniata declined only slightly. Most of the students at Juniata were taking preparatory courses, and weren't affected by the war. However, the 1921 Alfarata mentions that at least two Juniata boys gave their lives in the war.

Juniata, by 1924, had grown into its destiny. It was a thriving good, little college, growing from 16 graduates in 1897 to 66 graduates in 1924. Its campus was imposing, its students busy and happy with a comprehensive curriculum and varied extra-curricular activites. Its future was bright, and in the sure hands of Martin Brumbaugh, who after serving his state as governor, again became president in 1924.

Juniata had closed an era in 1924, when the normal school and academy were dropped. Then, in 1925, this institution completely concentrated its efforts on building its future as a fully accredited college of arts and sciences.



Enrollment had grown to 387 in 1925, and that was to jump to an efficient maximum of 500-600 in the early 1940's. A change in administration came in 1930 with the death of President Martin G. Brumbaugh. Dr. Charles G. Ellis became president and gave distinguished service in that office until his retirement in 1943.

It was in this period that the all-important curriculum was modernized into a program which won widespread acclaim in the educational world. As adopted in 1937, the curriculum offered to all students in the freshman year an introduction into the three main divisions of college study – arts and languages, the social studies, and the natural sciences. Competence in English and in one foreign language was required, as was also a course in Bible history. This was supplemented by a senior course in ethics – again following the religious tradition of the school.

Juniata truly had become a modern college of the highest quality and was being operated on a solid, business-like basis. In 1940, Juniata attained recognition by the Association of American Universities and in 1942, was placed on the accredited list of the American Chemical Society in recognition of its high standards in chemistry. Juniata College is also on the approved list of the American Association of University Women.

May Day 1927

And this was the era that saw the flowering of the clubs, sports and publications that had made their humble beginnings earlier. Dramatic clubs grew into the Masque Club, which was organized in 1927. Men's and Women's glee clubs were started in 1920, and were joined together in 1933 as the acappella choir — which later became the Juniate College Choir that brings widespread acclaim to the college.

May Day, which had a tentative start in 1917, became an annual event in 1924 and since then has been one of Juniata's yearly attractions. The student club system was reorganized in 1927 and this led to the establishment of Juniata's numerous clubs of specialized interest.

Thus, academically, physically, athletically, and socially, Juniata had reached its full-grown stature. But then came the devastating impact of World War II. It called into service 675 young men and women of Juniata, 24 of whom made the supreme sacrifice. The present and the future were gloomy for Juniata as the expansion period drew to a close in the early 1940's.

It was in the war's darkest days in 1943 that Dr. Calvert N. Ellis became president following the retirement of his father, Dr. C. C. Ellis. The elder Ellis continued to serve his alma mater as President Emeritus until his death in 1950.

All Class Night — 1955

During the war the institution's enrollment was sharply curtailed. It dropped from more than 500 before the war to a low of 240 in 1944.

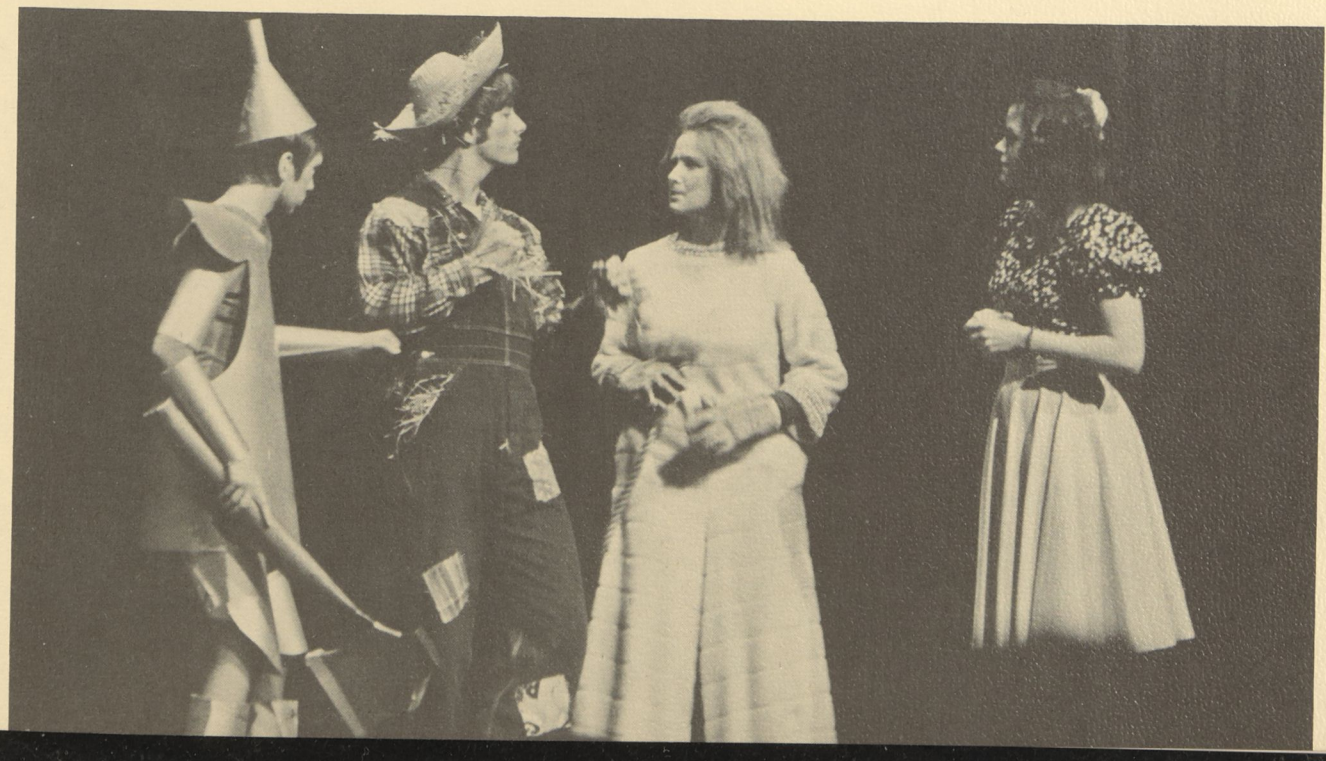
But the college lived without relaxing admission standards or losing key faculty members. Also, the administration, with the loyal help of alumni, was able to hold its own financially, without incurring any new debts during this troubled period.

The end of the war brought a new surge of life to the Church of the Bretheren College under its youthful president. Men returned from the battlefronts and immediately Juniata had a sudden increase in enrollment. It jumped to a wall-bulging high of 716 in 1948 as the veterans, older than average college students and intently serious, buckled down for a delayed education.

It was around 1930 or 1931 that All Club Night began. On a special night each club was to produce and perform an original play. All Club Night continued until sometime in the 1940's. It was discontinued because either one club seemed to dominate the whole affair or other clubs were unable to enter into the competition.

In the 1940's, the whole affair became known as All Class Night. Ever since then, once a year each class puts on an original production of a play. The themes are alternated from year to year between satyre, comedy, tragedy, and musicals. All Class Night has become one of the high points of the year and it involves the largest participation of the total student body.

All Class Night — 1974



Under President Calvert Ellis, a long, comprehensive view of the present and into the future started in March 1944. A Postwar Planning Commission was appointed and it organized ten associated committees composed of experts in specific fields. Each committee came to the campus and studied dilligently every phase of that area of the college program assigned to it.

Although the postwar program was essentially a building program, it affected the teaching program, social life, academic life, and the religious life of every student because its aims were a strong faculty, adequate facilities and the best curriculum.

New housing accomodations had to be found quickly because of the intense influx of new students. These came in Sherwood Lodge (1946) and The Village (1946). Other new additions were the Faculty Club (1946), Home Economics Building (1947), and the Swigart Music Hall (1950).

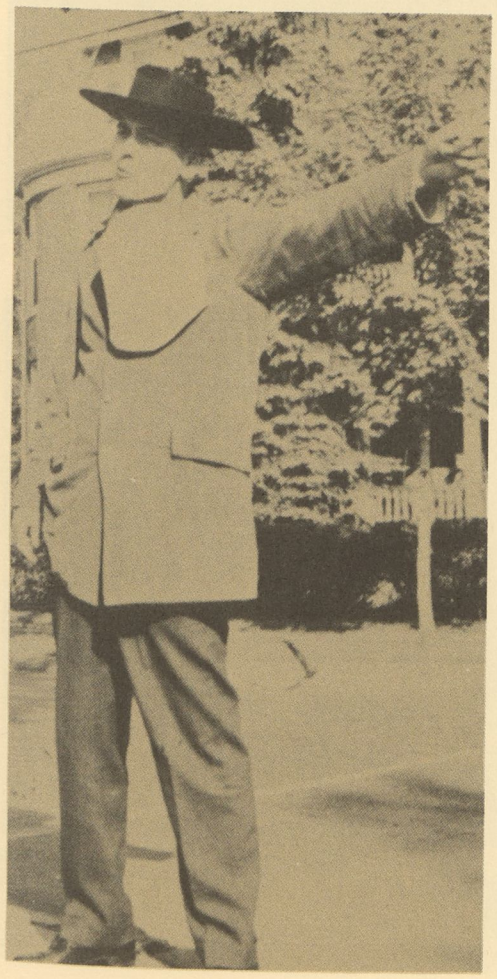
Not all of the growth was in the physical plant. In 1960, the faculty completed an intensive study of the curriculum. The principles and purposes of general education conceived in 1938 were reaffirmed. However, changes took place in preparation for the new students coming to Juniata. It was necessary to adjust the curriculum to the special abilities of the students for this generation. The program was designed to acquaint the students with the broad fields of man's knowledge and provide opportunities to pursue a specialized field of study.



Dr. Cherry directs traffic.

Another special event of Juniata's history was Library Moving Day. It all began one morning on September 19, 1963, when over 900 students and faculty members began moving the books from the old Carnegie Library to the new Beeghly Library. The smoothness of the operation was the result of careful planning by Mrs. Anne Catlin, director of libraries. Over 60,000 books were moved by yellow, blue, and red, teams under the direction of faculty traffic cops headed by Dr. Ronald Cherry. The Juniata band provided music to move the books by. Half the way through the morning, coffee and donuts revived the book movers. After lunch the moving continued, and over 40 students received assorted prizes — $5 coupons for the bookstore, records, free movie tickets — for their diligent efforts. The ringing of the victory bell in Founders marked the end of Library Moving Day.

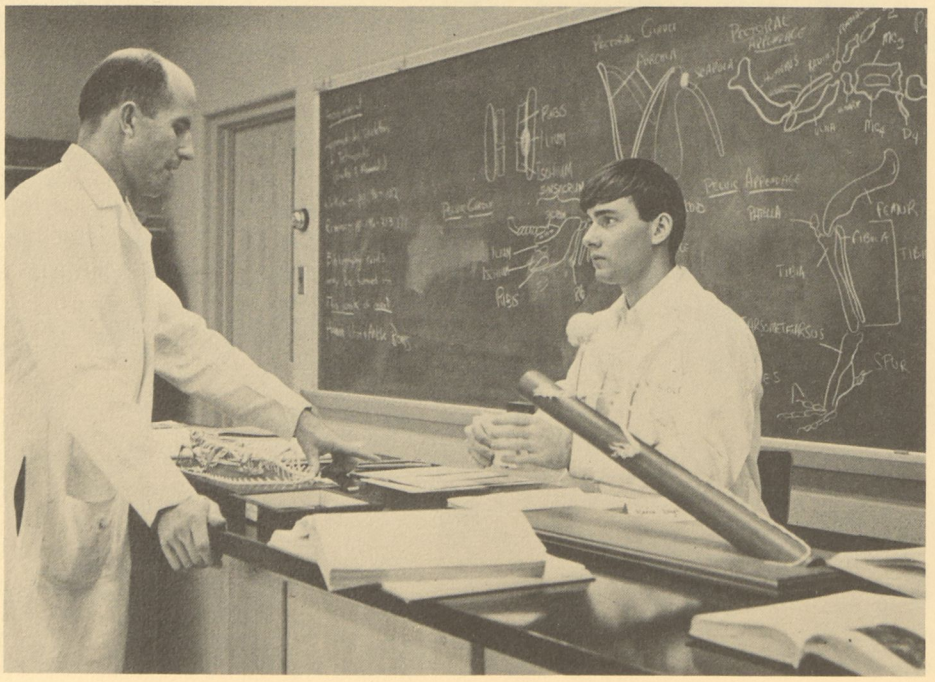
In 1965, the Brumbaugh Science Center was opened for use by the faculty, and students. This building is an impressive complex with three different wings housing the departments of chemistry, biology, physics, geology, and mathematics. One of the wings also contains the Computer Center, while the two-story, circular hub houses the 400 seat Alumni Auditorium, two smaller lecture halls, and the Myers Science Library.

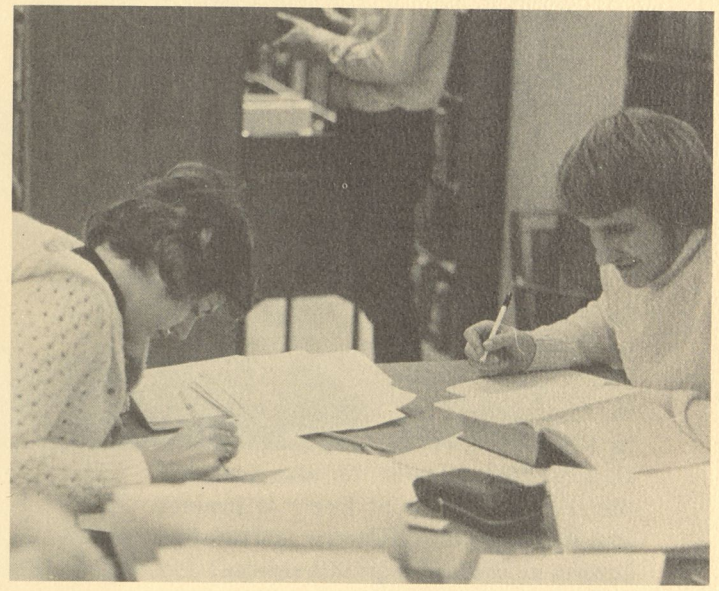
Students move books to the new library.

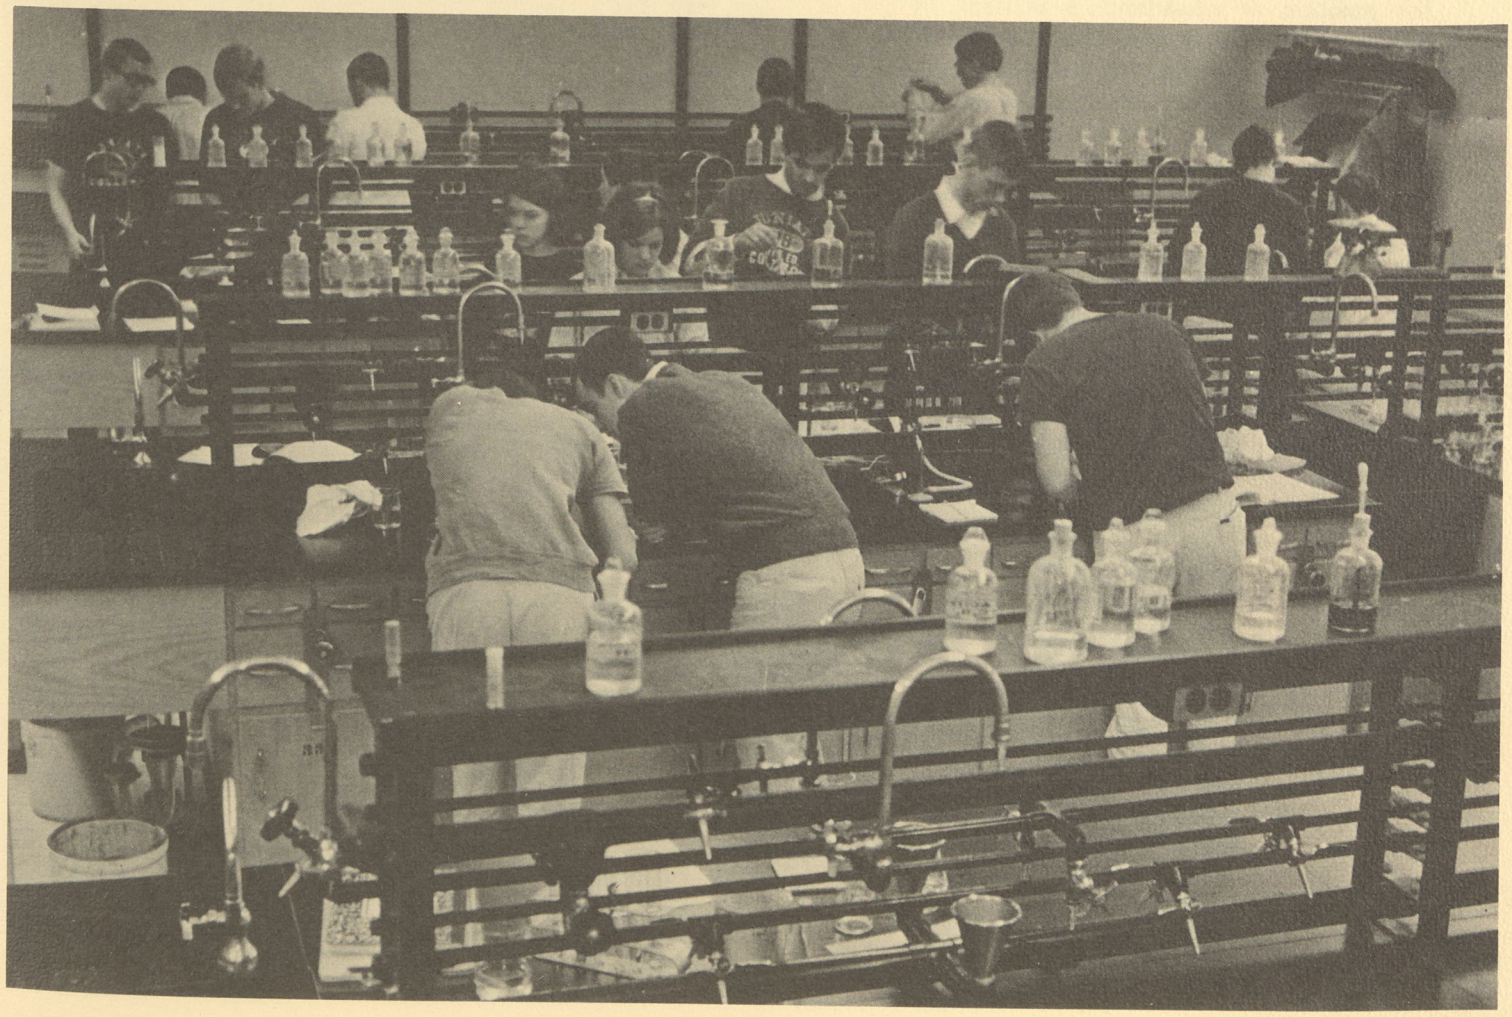
In 1971, Juniata College instituted an educational program that was designed to let a significant number of the educational decisions be made by the student after a period of preparation that is specifically planned to help the student engage in this decision making process. This educational program has acquired the title Program of Emphasis.

It is somewhat similar to what most colleges call a Major. Yet, in a number of respects, it is quite different. A major might be defined as a set of requirements which students must observe as they concentrate in a particular field of study. Obviously, some requirements are necessary. However, the traditional concept of a major can become a strait jacket, forcing the student to take courses in which he or she had little interest, and perhaps limiting his opportunities to take others that he feels would be more beneficial to him.

Juniata's program is designed to promote and develop the habits of mind and communication skills needed by an autonomous person. As a matter of high priority, each student will wrestle with profound issues of human value. He is to deal in a critical way with the methodologies and limitations in the areas he chooses for intensive work in order to gain intellectual perspective. It allows the student to concentrate in a single file to a much greater extent than he could have previously. The Juniata curriculum and the Program of Emphasis are based on the assumption that each student must decide for himself what he is trying to accomplish in college.



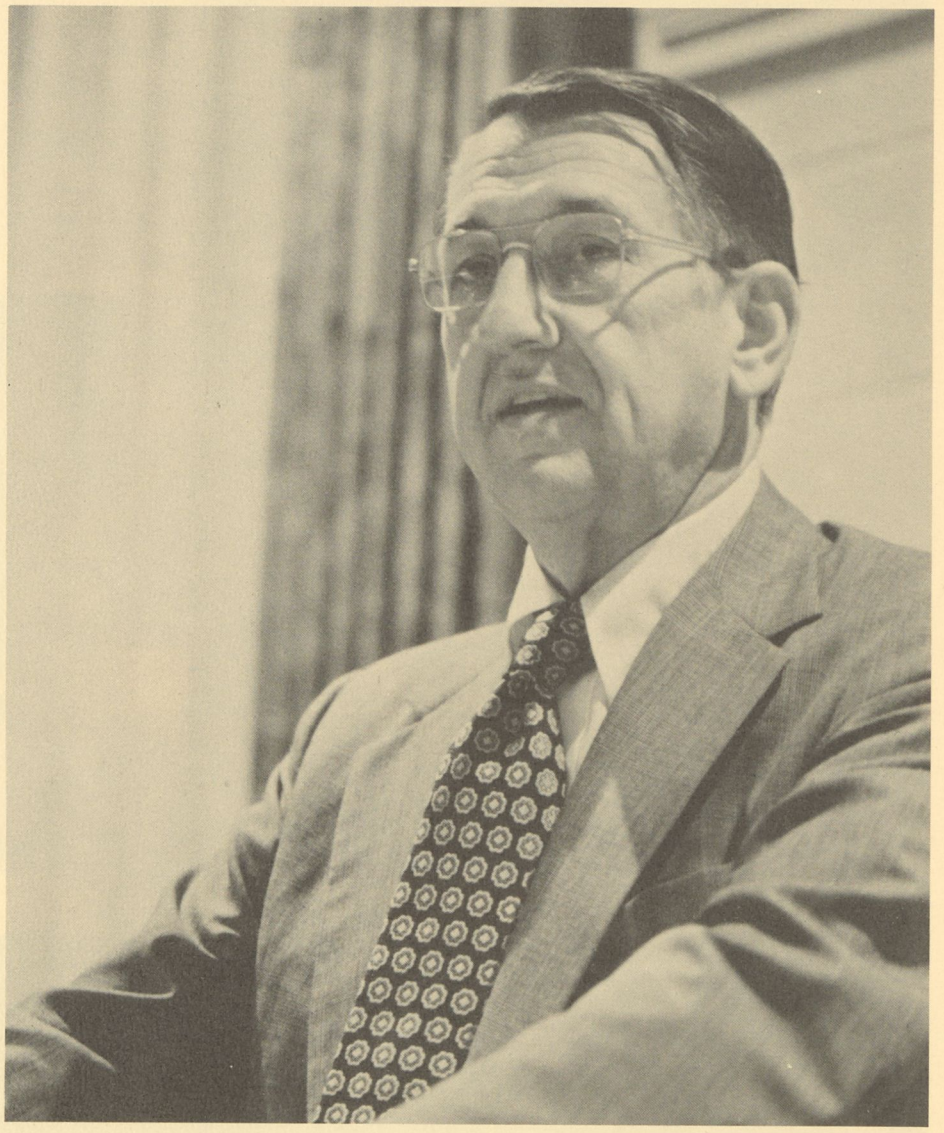


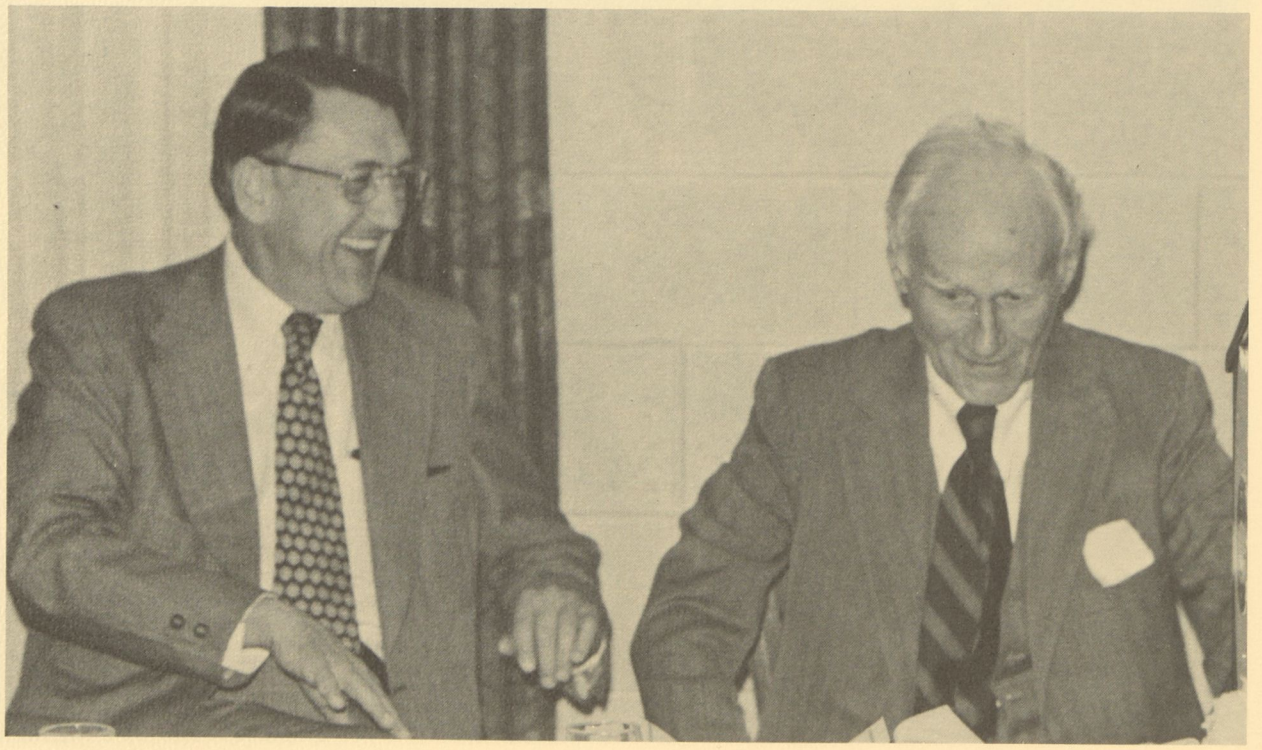


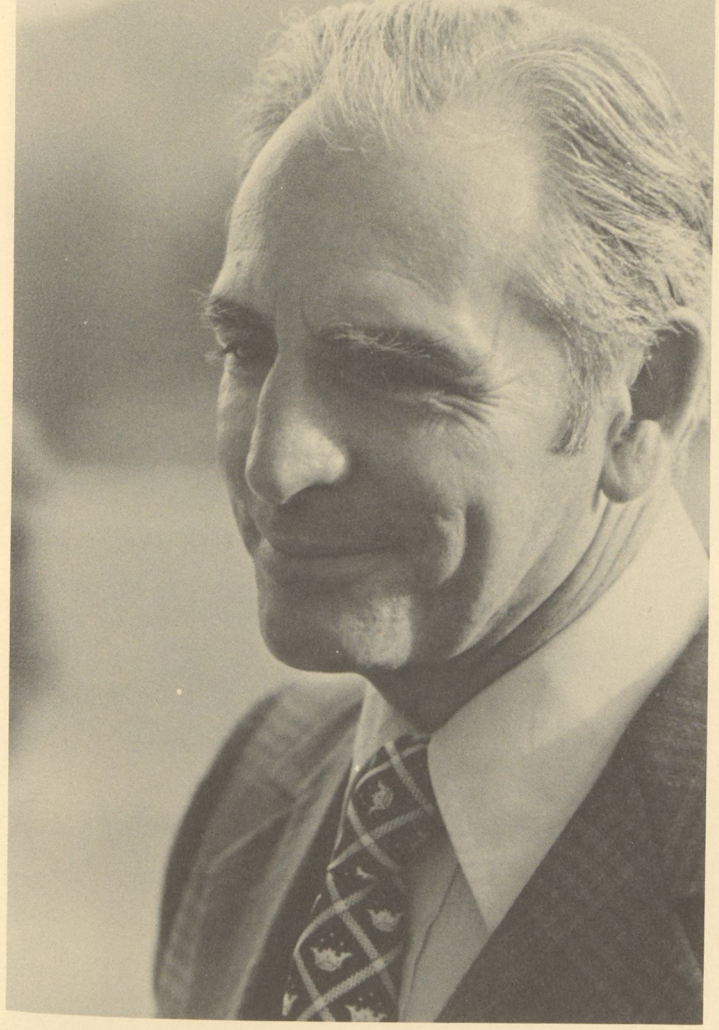
In 1968, Juniata acquired its seventh president, Dr. John N. Stauffer. Dr. Stauffer graduated from Juniata College in 1936.

Since receiving his B.S. at Juniata, Dr. Stauffer received a Master of Arts in Psychology at the University of Pennsylvania in 1942 and a Doctorate in Counseling and Higher Education in 1956 at the Pennsylvania State University. Also, in 1964, he was awarded the title of Doctor of Laws at Juniata and in 1968, that of Doctor of Humane Letters at Wittenburg University.

From 1963-1968 Dr. Stauffer held the position of president of Wittenburg University. It was in the summer of 1968 that Dr. Stauffer left the University of Wittenburg to return to his alma mater and fill the seat of President of the College which was vacated by Dr. Calvert N. Ellis.





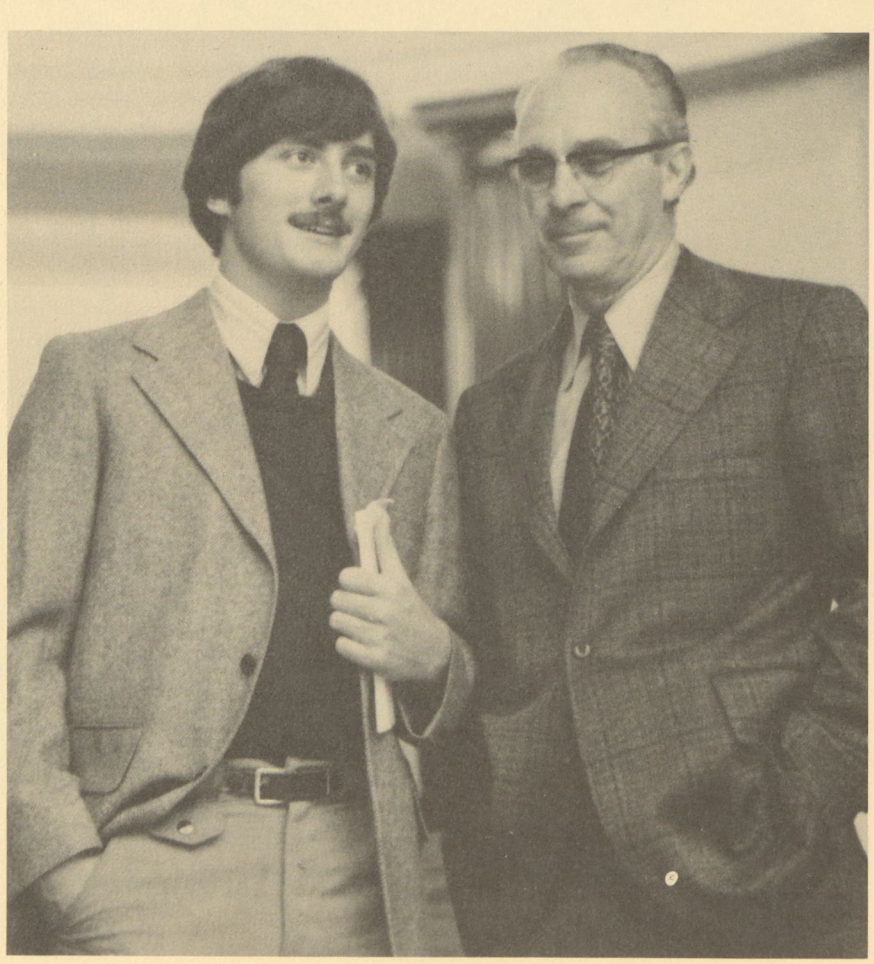


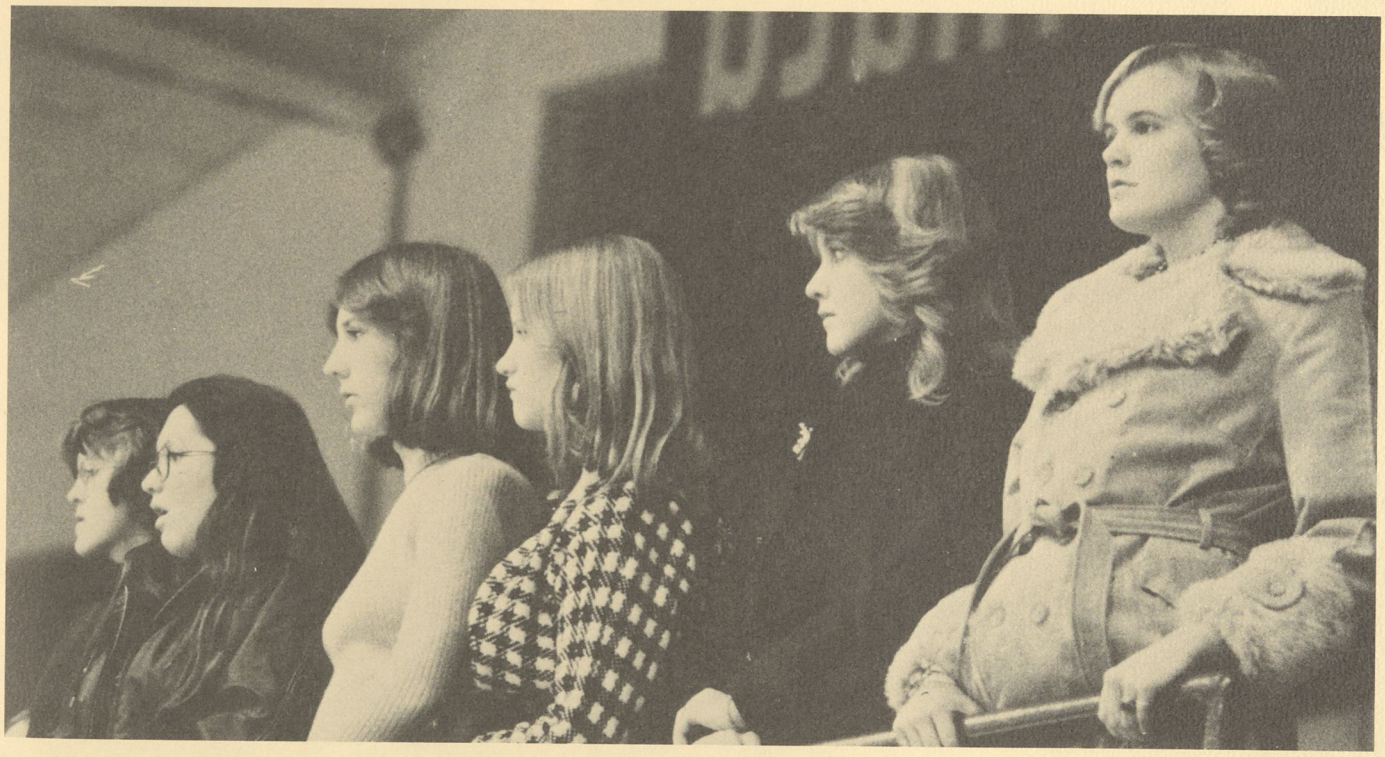
Dr. Frederick M. Binder, recently president of Whittier College in Whittier Calif., assumed his duties as eighth president of Juniata of Sept. 1, 1975. He succeeded Dr. John N. Stauffer, who had announced in March of 1975 his plans to step down from the post.

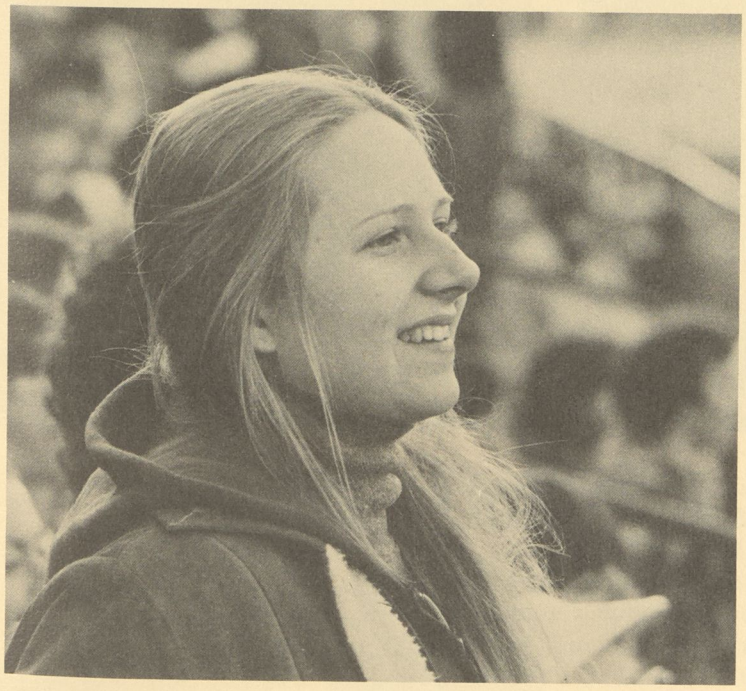
A native of New Jersey, Dr. Binder received his bachelor's degree from Ursinus College, Collegeville, Penna. in 1942. He received both his master's degree in American History and his Ph.D. in American Economic History from the University of Pennsylvania. His dissertation for the latter received the Newcomen Prize.

Under the leadership of a new president, Juniata embarked upon its centennial academic year in September 9, 1975. Founded on April 17, 1876, in a second-story room in the Brumbaugh Print Shop on Washington Street in Huntingdon, the College now fills 100 acres with 27 buildings, 12 of which have been built since 1960.

Juniata College has come a long way from the one room, three students and one teacher in 1876. Due to the diligence of its students, the vision of its faculty, and the loyal support of its alumni and friends, Juniata has been able to build the truth that sets free, today and tomorrow.







We wish to give our sincere thanks to Harold Brumbaugh for the extra effort he has put forth in helping us produce this Centennial Section. Throughout the years, Mr. Brumbaugh has donated much of his time and effort to the school and the students of Juniata College. It is with much gratitude that we dedicate this book to him.

THE ALFARATA

Finished – at last! One year for many, four years for others and a long year of hard work for the Alfarata staff. The book has been through alot of rough times; changing editors, missing pictures and trying to meet deadlines. All the workers on my staff have put many long hours into their sections and after seeing the finished product I'm sure they're as proud of the book as I am.

Many personal thanks go to my friends who have helped me over the rough spots; Ace when I needed pictures, John Graybill when I needed money, Mike Gilroy when I needed advice. I could go on forever and still leave someone out. There were also those not on the staff but were always there to help; Mr. Brumbaugh for history, Dave Diercksen for pictures and Coll, Jen, Mike, Greg and Dave for sympathy.

The pictures on these pages are of my staff because I'm proud of their work and feel they deserve the recognition. I apologize to those I've inadvertantly left out, but I thank them all the same. Congratulations and my best wishes to the Class of 1976!

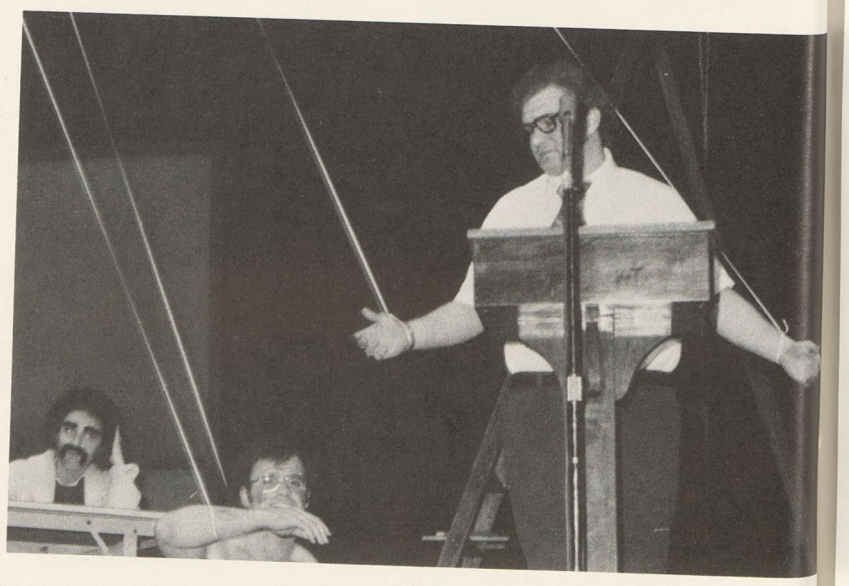
ALL CLASS NIGHT

1st PLACE JUNIORS

"But who cares"



All Class Night started off with a warm up concert by Riverside. Dewayne Rideout hosted the evenings entertainment. The Juniors came through again this year by winning the All Class Night Trophy for the second year in a row. The Juniors stayed closest to the evening's theme of satire by producing a hilarious parody of last year's widely touted S.T.A.R.T. day, which was renamed F.A.R.T.S. for the stage. The second place honors went to the Sophomore class for their take off on classroom production. Complete with an urban school room scene, a staged Boston Tea Party, and a visit by Ben Franklin. Third place went to the Seniors who have never had the pleasure of receiving the All Class Night Trophy. But, the Seniors have never had the misfortune of taking last place either. The Freshmen took last place with their take off on the Walton's.

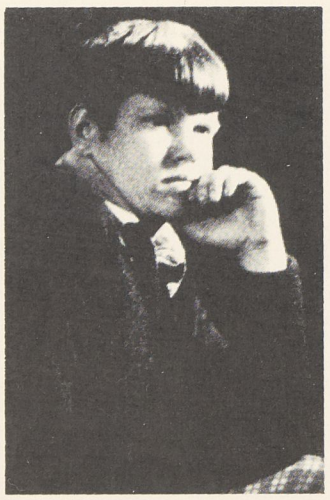
NO ONE ELSE HAS IT



This year The Kim Ford Studios of Huntingdon and Tyrone are offering each Juniata College Senior a contemporary portrait sitting. The sitting consists of a series of formal poses for yearbook use and a series of informal poses either in the studio or outdoors. Seniors from last year's graduating class were introduced to our series of informal contemporary poses and the comments were unbelievable. A special reduction of prices is available to the graduating senior. Why not schedule your senior appointment now!
